COURSE DESCRIPTION – Fall 2009

The Government Department internship program provides students an opportunity to combine work experience in government and politics with intellectual reflection on their experience. Making the most of the course requires interns to work as diligent part-time employees in their positions while reflecting thoughtfully and analytically on their experience in the organizations in which they work.

The general objectives of the internship program are:

1. To provide students with first-hand experience working in government and politics;
2. To incorporate this experience into the contexts of their intellectual education at the university and of public expectations of politics and government;
3. To use interns' experiences to think about the dynamics of politics and government as features of contemporary society; and
4. To use interns' experience to think about the practice of politics as a profession.

Most of students' time and energy will be directed toward performing the duties of their internships in a manner that reflects positively on them and on The University of Texas at Austin. A solid performance as an intern provides a rich learning experience, the possibility of future intellectual and professional opportunities, and also reflects well on the program, paving the way for future students to have the same opportunities current interns enjoy.

However, interns should be clear about the nature of this course. Students are not receiving credit from the Government Department primarily for fulfilling their internships. Students receive grades and credit for completing the internships in conjunction with guided course work. Supervisor evaluations are taken into account in assigning grades, but the primary consideration in assigning grades is the quality of academic work completed for the course.

WRITING ASSIGNMENTS

Assignment 1 (Due: September 25): Situating the Practice of Politics

Length: 1500 words

Value: 20% of final grade

Description: Identify and assess the central elements of "politics as a vocation" in Weber's essay. Weber wrote this in 1919 -- what are the implications of Weber's interpretation for contemporary democratic politics? Pay particular attention to implications for contemporary politics in the general area (i.e. the legislature, executive office, campaign professional, etc.) in which you will be an intern.

This assignment is designed to get you to dissect and comprehend Weber's essay, and to extend it into the contemporary context in which you find yourself. But do not dwell on your specific context of your internship -- the main burden is to convey that you have spent time getting a grasp of the essay, and that you can extend the central arguments and implications of the essay into the present.

Material:

Max Weber, "Politics as a Vocation"

(http://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Politics_as_a_Vocation, or in print in H.H. Gerth and C. Wright Mills (Translated and edited), From Max Weber: Essays in Sociology, pp. 77-128, New York: Oxford University Press.)

Assignment 2 (Due: October 30): Reflecting on Popular Representations of Politics

Length: 1250 words

Value: 20% of grade

Value: 20% of final grade

Description: Read Karen Olsson's Waterloo and write an essay about the characterization of the professional practice of politics in the novel. How does the novel present ethical choices faced by political professionals in the various roles presented in the book? Organize your essay around an argument for your interpretation of the book's overall portrayal of politics in Texas.

Assignment 3 (Due: December 4): Assessment of Weber and Your Internship

Length: 1500 words

Value: 25% of final grade

Description:

Assess the lessons of your internship in light of Weber's understanding of politics as a vocation. Choose three arguments or observations relevant to your experience, and assess (with examples) the degree to which Weber's description and analysis seems apt for the contemporary practice of politics as you experienced it during your internship. NOTE: this paper should NOT be a rewrite of your first paper.

SUPERVISOR EVALUATIONS

Supervisors must evaluate interns twice, at mid-semester and at the semester's end. Assessment forms are available at the course website. Your supervisors should either email or mail assessments to the coordinator at jhenson@mail.la.utexas.edu.

These evaluations are due by October 30 and December 9.

Interns should provide supervisors with plenty of lead time, and make sure forms are available to them.

VIDEO TAPED EXIT INTERVIEW

Students are required to sit for a recorded video interview during the last week of regular classes. Students will be asked a short set of questions about their experiences in their internships, what they learned, and their reflections on the overall experience. Students will be asked to sign a waiver allowing the use of the videos for instruction of future interns and for use in other instructional settings. Students may choose not to allow the use of their interview, but the interview is still a required assignment.

CLASS EMAIL LIST

gov-interns@utlists.utexas.edu

ABOUT THE EMAIL LIST

Students are already subscribed to the class email list. You have probably already received mail unless you were added late or did not provide a current email address when you applied to the program.

An important thing to remember from the outset: if you need to email Dr. Henson, send email directly to his individual address, not to the list.

Messages and announcements posted to the web can also be viewed on the online message board listed above. Follow the directions there to manage your email subscription. I strongly urge students to spend time at the website for the list familiarizing themselves with the options for your subscription. The URL for the list web page is <http://muttley.laits.utexas.edu/mailman/listinfo/gov-interns-list>

Ground rules for posting to the list are as follows:

- Material posted to the list should be relevant to the internships program.
- No personal or commercial messages.
- Postings taken from other sources must contain citations, whether printed or electronic.
- Postings must be consistent with the UT policies governing information technology use. (See <http://www.utexas.edu/cc/policies/responsible.html>)

Non-compliance with these guidelines will result in the loss of posting privileges. Dr. Henson reserves the right to modify these guidelines.

Suggestions for using the list:

- Pause before sending messages, and:
 - Think about whether the tone and content of your message are appropriate to the list.
 - Think about whether it is necessary for everyone on the list to read your message. It might be more appropriate to send the message directly to an individual.
- Use the subject line to provide substantive information to recipients (for example, "Question about class meeting," "Film interpretation assignment,")
- Spell-check mailings for the sake of clarity.
- If you use your own computer and a mail program that allows it, keep messages you want to save in a folder created for list messages. If there's a spurt of messages in which you are only marginally interested, it will reduce your irritation.
- In general, be civil. Avoid being snotty and/or rude. Expecting clarity and intellectual honesty is neither rude nor snotty; belittling someone else, or being excessively impatient with them, because they have not lived up to your standards of these criteria, is snotty, usually feels rude, and violates norms of civility.

NOTE: these boilerplate guidelines are class policy, but were written with larger classes of freshman and sophomores in mind. Interns are strongly encouraged to use the email list to discuss their experiences with the rest of the class and to share information and lessons learned.
