Course Description

What is “Victorian” about the Victorian novel? What does the novel tell us about the way “Victorians” perceived themselves and their place in Britain, the British Empire, and the world? Is there a difference between the nineteenth-century “English” novel and its Scottish and Irish contemporaries? Among many other things, the Victorian novel concerned itself with questions of identity: national and imperial, economic and social, religious and gender. People accustomed to finding their predetermined place in the social order began to see themselves as part of larger groups with common interests: owners and workers, landlords and tenants, men and women, Whigs and Tories. In this class we will test Disraeli’s famous characterization of Victorian Britain as “Two Nations,” one wealthy and complacent, the other dispossessed and menacing, will be a starting point for examining the Victorian novel’s quest to find a stable basis for personal and social identity in the midst of bewildering change.

• Weekly reading. Reading assignments for each class are given in the detailed syllabus below. Please come to class prepared to discuss the readings assigned for that class period.

• Weekly Response Essays and Regular participation in class discussions. Although there may be a few short lectures to provide relevant historical or cultural contexts for the reading, class discussion is the primary method of instruction and will be emphasized and encouraged. To help facilitate the discussion, weekly response papers will be due on each Friday during the course of the semester, exclusive of the first week of class.

• Oral presentation. Each student will give one brief (5-10 minute) oral presentation during the semester. One biographical presentation will be given for each of the authors we will be studying. The remaining presentations will involve selecting one critical reading of the novel we are reading (e.g., a journal article) and explaining it to the class.

• Exams. There will be two take-home exams during the semester. The exams will consist of two or three short essays.

• Paper proposal. Each student will develop a brief paper proposal (250-500 words) on a topic of interest for the final paper. You are free to select your own topics, or you are welcome to discuss potential topics with me. Once you have selected a topic and I have approved it, each student will briefly outline his or her topic for the class.
• Final paper. The final paper will be due on the date indicated on the syllabus. The final paper should be no longer than 1,500-2,000 words.

• Mandatory attendance. Attendance is mandatory. If you must miss a class, please let me know in advance, if possible. You will still be responsible for the reading and getting notes from another student on what you missed.

The University of Texas Honor Code:
The core values of The University of Texas at Austin are learning, discovery, freedom, leadership, individual opportunity, and responsibility. Each member of the University is expected to uphold these values through integrity, honesty, trust, fairness, and respect toward peers and community.

University Electronic Mail Notification Policy:
(Use of E-mail for Official Correspondence to Students)
All students should become familiar with the University’s official e-mail student notification policy. It is the student’s responsibility to keep the University informed as to changes in his or her e-mail address. Students are expected to check e-mail on a frequent and regular basis in order to stay current with University-related communications, recognizing that certain communications may be time-critical. It is recommended that e-mail be checked daily, but at a minimum, twice per week. The complete text of this policy and instructions for updating your e-mail address are available at: http://www.utexas.edu/its/policies/emailnotify.html.

In this course e-mail will be used as a means of communication with students. You will be responsible for checking your e-mail regularly for class work and assignments. Note: if you are an employee of the University, your e-mail address in Blackboard is your employee address.

Use of Blackboard in Classes:
This course uses Blackboard, a Web-based course management system in which a password-protected site is created for each course. (Student enrollments in each course are updated each evening.)

E328: The English Novel in the Nineteenth Century
Blackboard can be used to distribute course materials, to communicate and collaborate online, to post grades, to submit assignments, and to take online quizzes and surveys.

You will be responsible for checking the Blackboard course site regularly for class work and announcements. As with all computer systems, there are occasional scheduled downtimes as well as unanticipated disruptions. Notification of these disruptions will be posted on the Blackboard login page. Scheduled downtimes are not an excuse for late work. However, if there is an unscheduled downtime for a significant period of time, I will make an adjustment if it occurs close to the due date.

Blackboard is available at http://course.utexas.edu. Support is provided by the ITS Help Desk at 475-9400 Monday through Friday 8 am to 6 pm, so plan accordingly.
