Course Description:

This course is an introduction to Cultural Anthropology. It is designed to introduce students to the central concepts, theories, and techniques employed by cultural anthropologists to explore the social and cultural dimensions of human experience. The course is organized around central questions in the study of human societies, including: the anthropological idea of progress; language and symbolism; gender and race; power and resistance; nationalism; and modernization, globalization and cultural representation.

The instructor’s aim is for students to emerge from the course with an enhanced understanding of their own experiences as social and cultural beings, an awareness of the diversity and complexity of cultures and societies, an awareness of the historical structures of power that shape both the practice and representation of culture, and an awareness of various approaches to communication, interpretation, and representation across cultures. The development of critical and analytical thinking skills is also a central aim of this course. Readings, lectures, group activities, and films all work together to develop these skills and equip students to better understand, interpret and navigate the complexities of distinct cultures and societies, including their own.

Course Requirements and Grading:

Success in this course involves mastering both the concepts and the methodology of the cultural anthropologist. Thus, students will be asked to do certain things as well as display certain knowledge. As this is a class based on active participation of all students, students can expect a steady diet of in-class activities, short writing assignments, and week-by-week forms of evaluation. Students are expected to attend all scheduled classes and section meetings—including media presentations and guest lectures.

There will be two in-class tests for this course, two take-home essay tests, and two written essay assignments. Tests may be made up only with the instructor’s permission (which will be given only in the case of documented illnesses or emergencies). Written exercises and take home tests are due on or before their due dates and will not be accepted after the published due date in the syllabus.

PLEASE NOTE: THERE WILL BE AN EXAM GIVEN DURING OUR FINAL EXAM SLOT. DO NOT SCHEDULE A PLANE TICKET OR ACTIVITY BEFORE THIS DATE!

CLASS LECTURES: Students are expected to attend class regularly. Exercises and discussions in section meetings will assume you have heard the lecture materials and completed the assigned readings. Students missing a class will be responsible for consulting with their T.A. about viewing any video materials used in class.

SECTION MEETINGS: Every student will be assigned a section with obligatory meetings each week. Attendance will be taken, and regular exercises will be submitted and discussed in section. Attendance and participation—through in class discussion, discussion blogs, and class presentations-- will constitute 20% of your semester grade.
This means that your grade will be lowered by one letter grade at least, if you do not attend your sections and participate regularly. The due dates for the two take-home exams and two written exercises are listed in your syllabus. NO EMAILED EXAMS WILL BE ACCEPTED. The section you are assigned is listed on your registration materials, and is also available through the Blackboard. You must attend the section for which you are officially enrolled. If you need to change sections for any reason, you must go through the University administrative system for changing courses.

FILMS: The written text materials and ethnographies will be supplemented with a variety of ethnographic and other films and media clips. These will be shown during class, and most are also available for viewing in the UGL Audio-Visual Collection (FAC, 3rd floor).
Some are only available in the Department of Anthropology and you must arrange with your T.A. to view these if you need to do so outside of class.
TESTS (35%): This portion of your grade consists of your midterm and final exam. The midterm exam will be given on a regular class day, and the final exam will be given during the regular three hour final exam period. DO NOT ARRANGE TO LEAVE THE UNIVERSITY BEFORE YOUR FINAL EXAM DATE! The course final will only cover material from the second half of the course (after spring break). Each test (the midterm and the final) will include both multiple choice questions and short essays. Questions will include material covered in the assigned readings, lectures, discussions, and films from class. Make-up exams will only be given in the event of a serious illness or emergency, for which official documentation is required.

TAKE-HOME ESSAYS (20%): There will also be two 2-page written take-home essays during the course of the semester, which will specifically test you on your understanding of the ethnographies we have read in class. Each essay is worth 10% of your overall course grade.

WRITTEN EXERCISES (25%): Two written ethnographic exercises will be assigned during the semester. Each should be between 4-5 pages in length. These must be typed, double spaced and brought to your section meeting on or before the due date posted in your syllabus. The first exercise is worth 10% of your overall course grade; the second assignment is worth 15% of your overall grade.

SECTION PARTICIPATION (10%): Based on attendance and regular participation in discussions and exercises in section and class presentation.

DISCUSSION BLOGS (10%): Most weeks, your instructor and/or TA will formulate a question/prompt in the discussion section of your blackboard which relates to your readings/topic for the week. There will be ten blogs total, which will each count 1% of your final grade. You will get a point for turning the blog in on time; no points for a late or missed blog. All blog entries are due by 5pm the day before your section.

GRADING: Grades for each assignment will carry the following weight toward your final grade for the course:

- Midterm Exam: 15%
- Final Exam: 20%
- Written Exercises: 25%
- Take-Home Essays: 20%
- Section Participation: 10%
- Discussion Blogs: 10%

Required Course Readings

Required readings include three textbooks, as well as a small number of articles or book chapters. All required textbooks will be available in the University Co-op Bookstore. All required articles will be available on Blackboard. The required textbooks include:
Use of Blackboard and Electronic Reserves

The course has a Blackboard website which will be demonstrated during the first week of the class and in your section. It includes the syllabus, any instructions or announcements to students, an electronic gradebook and access to all required article readings. Students in the class are responsible for checking this Blackboard site regularly, which you can access by clicking on “Blackboard” under “Popular Sites” on the upper left side of the UT home page. Students are also responsible for regularly checking the e-mail account that is registered with the University. All e-mails to the professor or teaching assistants should either be done through Blackboard, or include “ANT 302” in the subject line; otherwise they may inadvertently be missed. Your weekly discussion blogs will be posted on the Blackboard account for your individual section (by unique number). All other communication—including the syllabus, any announcements, assignments, and class readings, will be found under a Blackboard account that has the word MASTER in it for our semester: (sp11) ANT 302 MASTER.
