This graduate seminar is devoted to close a reading of Tocqueville’s Democracy in America. We will also read some of the best recent secondary work on Tocqueville, including a number of articles and essays as well as two books, by Pierre Manent and Sheldon Wolin. Last year marked publication of the first English translation of the French critical edition of Democracy in America -- a bilingual text in four volumes, edited by Eduardo Nolla. This is a massive and remarkable achievement and will be the main focus of the seminar. We will also take a look at a very recently published volume of letters about America that Tocqueville wrote subsequent to Democracy.

Since mid-century, it seems that every decade has been marked by a flurry of interest in one or two political philosophers. The sixties witnessed considerable interest in Marx and Hegel; the seventies produced numerous studies of Rousseau; the early eighties were a fruitful time for new studies of Locke; the late eighties and early nineties a lot of attention was devoted to Foucault; more recently, studies of Tocqueville have flourished. Tocqueville seems to speak to contemporary concerns. Emulating democracies, designing democracies, and sustaining democracies are all efforts of practical significance now. One of the reasons Tocqueville may be important today is that his work represents a model of political inquiry attentive to the relation of theory to practice. His work has appeal for students of comparative politics, of political culture, of the diffusion of ideas in politics, as well as to students of democratic theory and political philosophy more generally.

I would thus like to tailor the seminar to the various interests students bring to it.

Requirements:

The most important requirement is preparation for each seminar and participation in our conversation. In addition to regular preparation and participation by all seminar participants (enrolled and auditors), every enrolled student will prepare two short (1,000 word) statements to introduce, elaborate, and interpret portions of the reading of interest. Thus, each week, the conversation will be led by me and by two students who read their short papers and lead part of the discussion. I need to receive hard copies of these papers by 3pm the day of the seminar.

Among the texts we will discuss is a new collection of Tocqueville’s correspondence on America. Many of these letters may be of interest to biographers but hold little value for political theorists. We will divide up this text, read portions over the month of February, and report back to the seminar on which items merit close reading by all of us during sessions later in the semester.

In addition to the two short papers/interventions, students have a choice of a) a take-home essay exam at the end of the course, for which students will write two 1500 word analytic essays drawn from a list of several themes that I will distribute OR b) a 15-25 page analytic-research paper on some aspect(s) of Tocqueville’s thought on a topic chosen by you. Due date will be Monday, May 9.

Schedule:
Week 1  January 18

Democracy in America

Author’s Foreword to Twelfth Edition (appendix 6) in Vol. 4 of Lolla ed.

Author’s Introduction

recommended: Marvin Zetterbaum, Tocqueville and the Problem of Democracy

Week 2  January 25

Democracy

Part 1, chaps 4-8,
Nolla edition: translators note, and editors Foreword.
Schleifer, “Tocqueville’s Democracy in America Reconsidered” in Welch.

Week 3  February 1

Democracy

Part II, chaps 1 -6
Manent, “Tocqueville, Political Philosopher” in Welch
Villa, “Tocqueville and Civil Society” in Welch.
Mansfield, Short introduction, pp. 24-36

Week 4  February 8

Democracy

vol 1, part 2, chaps 6-9
Mansfield, short introduction 37-56.

Vol 1, part 2, chap. 10.
[in packet]

Week 5  February 15

Democracy

Vol 2, Part 1, preface, chaps 1-8
Mitchell, “Tocqueville on Democratic Religious Experience” in Welch

recommended:
Michael Locke McLendon, “Tocqueville, Jansenism and the Psychology of Freedom” AIPS (July 2006) and possibly, rebuttal by Mary Love to be posted or circulated if there is interest.
Week 6  February 22
_Democracy_
Vol 2, part 1, chaps 9-21
Manent, Tocqueville and the Nature of Democracy, chaps. 3-6

Week 7  March 1
_Democracy_
Vol 2, part 2, chaps. 1-9
Pierre Manent, _Tocqueville and the Nature of Democracy_, 7-9

Week 8  March 8
_Democracy_
Vol 2, part 2, chaps 10-20.

March 14-19  Spring Break

Week 9  March 22
_Democracy_
Vol 2, part 3, chaps. 1-12
Winthrop, “Tocqueville’s American Woman” _Political Theory_, May 1986 (in packet)

Week 10  March 29
_Democracy_

recommended: Steven Pittz, “Tocqueville on Equality and Centralization,” forthcoming, _Journal of Politics_, to be posted or circulated if there is interest.

Week 11  April 5
Mansfield, short introduction, pp. 57-83.

Week 12  April 12
Discussion of Appendices, including one in packet
Tocqueville, Letters (selected)

Week 13  April 19
Tocqueville, Letters (selected)
Nunz, “Tocqueville and the Americans” in Welch.

Week 14  April 26
Wolin, _Tocqueville Between Two Worlds_, pp. 1-167

Week 15  May 3

recommended: Steven Bilakovics, _Democracy Without Politics_, (forthcoming, Harvard University Press.) chapters to be posted or circulated if there is interest.