Syllabus GOV 382M (unique #38920) 2012
Maimonides' Guide Of The Perplexed
TTH 12:30pm-2:00pm Calhoun 22
(NOTE: No class April 19)

Prof. Thomas Pangle
Mezes Hall 3.154; tel.: 232 1529
tpangle@austin.utexas.edu
Office Hours: Monday, 1:30-4:30 P.M.

TEXT to be studied:

FORMAL REQUIREMENTS AND BASIS OF GRADING:
—10-15 page interpretative paper on some portion of, or theme or problem in, The Guide and/or another work of Maimonides. Some suggested topics will be distributed. Due May 11 (40%).
—class participation (10%).
—Beginning second week (Jan 23), ten short assignments, one due by email before the first class of each of ten of the remaining weeks: 5 one-two page papers (500 words max.) interpreting a portion of the text that is to be discussed that week; AND 5 sets of three questions (each set 200 words max.) that would need to be answered to understand any portion of the text to be discussed that week (50%).

As an introduction to Maimonides, study before the first class the following few pages:
Excerpts from Maimonides' first work, Treatise on the Art of Logic, chaps. 3, 8, and esp. 14, in Ethical Writings, pp. 156-61 (see below). The key portion of chap. 14 (M’s description of political science) is also available in Medieval Political Philosophy: A Sourcebook (Cornell, 1963 and 2011).
—together with:

Also recommended, for M’s own “map” to the traditional Jewish legal writings:
Maimonides' Introduction to the Talmud [actually, this is the Introduction to M’s Commentary on the Mishnah], trans. Lampel, Judaica Press, 1975 and 1998.
Maimonides’ statement of the thirteen cardinal principles of the Judaic faith, in his Commentary on the Mishnah, Introduction to Sanhedrin, Perea Heleq, available in —Available online at: http://www.panix.com/~jjbaker/13yesodos.html
—Also helpful for orientation to the tradition of Jewish legal writings is: Everyman’s Talmud, ed. Cohen. Schocken, 1975, esp. the introd., pp. xv-xxxvii.
—The Talmud in English is available online: http://halakhah.com/
Other relevant works of Maimonides:

Other selected useful secondary literature:

——. “Note on Maimonides’ Letter on Astrology.” In Studies in Platonic Political Philosophy.

Chronology of the four most significant books of Maimonides (born about 1138, d. about 1204)

1) Around 1163: Treatise on Logic, in Arabic (the only painstaking translation of the entire work is: Traité de logique, trans. Brague, Desclée de Brouwer, 1996).

2) 1161-68: Commentary on the Mishnah, written in Judeo-Arabic (i. e., Arabic written with the Hebrew alphabet); six vols. corresponding to the six parts of the Mishnah, (which is the core of the Talmudic writings, being the written version of the oral law, upon which the rest of the Talmud comments); this was somewhat revised during the rest of M’s life, in light of and subordinated to the next item, Mishneh Torah). —Esp. important are the Introduction to the entire work (for trans., see above); the Introduction to Tractate Sanhedrin, with the famous 13 principles of the law (see above); and Eight Chapters or Introd. to Pirke Avot (M.’s major treatise on ethics—in Ethical Writings above).

3) 1168-77: Mishneh Torah, in Hebrew, 14 vols.—M’s codification of the Jewish law.