Course Description

In this class, we will explore some of the greatest works of classical epic, tragedy, and philosophy. We will use them not only to get a better understanding of a society very different from our own, but also to help us think about questions of enduring importance. What is justice? What is virtue? What is love, and what should we expect from it? How should we think about God and religion? What about the life of the mind – what is its place in political society, and in a well-lived human life? We will examine the answers given to these questions in classical Greece and compare those answers to our own. But beyond that, we will see that the works which we read are more than mirrors of their times; their authors reflected profoundly on these basic questions, challenging and transcending the conventions of their own society. We will find that many of their insights are still valid, and that they can teach us about today’s moral and political situation.

This course carries the Global Cultures flag and is intended to give you an understanding of ancient Greece as one of the most important sources of Western ideas, as well as an outside perspective on our modern liberal democratic society.

This course also carries the writing flag. Writing flag courses are designed to give students experience with writing in an academic discipline. In this class, you can expect to write regularly during the semester, complete substantial writing projects, and receive feedback from your instructors to help you improve your writing. You will also have the opportunity to revise and expand two of your short assignments and to read and discuss your peers’ work. You should therefore expect a substantial portion of your grade to come from your written work.

This course has no prerequisites.

Attendance will be taken at the beginning of each class and quizzes on the assigned reading will be given at the beginning of class on random days throughout the term. There will be no penalty for absences due to religious holidays for which you have notified us at least 14 days in advance, or for documented illnesses or family emergencies. Your attendance, quiz, and participation mark will fall by one letter grade (10%) for each unexcused absence. Quizzes cannot be made up, but your lowest quiz grade will be dropped. Active participation in class is expected.

Papers will be graded for the quality of the writing as well as for their substantive content. For advice on writing papers in political philosophy, please go to https://webspace.utexas.edu/lsp226/lorrainepangle/advice.html. For individual help with paper writing, please come to our office hours any time or visit the Undergraduate Writing Center, info at http://uwc.utexas.edu/. Late papers will not be accepted unless you have a medical excuse or family emergency.
Plus and minus grades will be used, as follows: 93-100: A; 90-92: A-; 87-89: B+; 83-86: B; 80-82: B-; 77-79: C+; 73-76: C; 70-72: C-; 60-69: D; below 60: F.
