Description:

The movement of peoples across national borders, either voluntarily or as the result of man-made or natural catastrophes, is a defining characteristic of contemporary world affairs. This course will focus on the political sources and consequences of global migration. We will concentrate on the politics of immigration in two continental settings: Western Europe and North America. The US is a traditional country of immigration; Western Europe encountered mass immigration for the first time in its modern history only after WWII. The course will be explicitly comparative, seeking to uncover and understand the similarities and differences in the migrations and policies in the two arenas and to clarify key debates about the prerogatives of states and the rights of immigrants.

Requirements:

Attendance: Students are not required to attend class, but attendance is encouraged. Experience suggests that attendance is positively associated with grades. But we are all adults, so suit yourself, but as my late mother used to warn: “As you make your bed, so shall you lie upon it.” When I ignored her I usually endured a lot of sleepless nights.

Exams: There will be two exams during regular class periods; the first on Thursday February 21 and the second on Thursday, May 2, our final scheduled class for the semester. Exams will cover only the material since the previous exam. Exams will be a mixture of multiple choice items and essay, with some student choice as to the exact mix.

Writing Assignments: Each student will be asked to write two reaction pieces in response to the assigned readings. The papers should be roughly two pages and will be due on February 19 and April 25.
Academic Dishonesty: The University has a strong and clear policy on academic dishonesty. The rule is simple: work you represent as your own should in fact be your own. This means that during exams you do not borrow from neighbors or consult supporting materials. It means more broadly that you will conduct yourself with honesty and dignity in the class and expect the same from your fellow classmates and your instructors. Violations of this policy will be dealt with according to University procedures and could result in an F for the course or more severe sanctions.

Students with Disabilities: The University complies with federal law in providing reasonable accommodation for students with disabilities. Students with disabilities may request appropriate academic accommodations from the Division of Diversity and Community Engagement, Services for Students with Disabilities, 471-6259, http://www.utexas.edu/diversity/ddce/ssd/

Observance of Religious Holy Days: By UT Austin policy, you must notify me of your pending absence at least fourteen days prior to the date of observance of a religious holy day. If you must miss a class, an examination, a work assignment, or a project in order to observe a religious holy day, you will be given an opportunity to complete the missed work within a reasonable time after the absence.

Extra Credit: Students may earn extra credit on their final course average in two ways: (1) by submitting a page or page and a half report on a public lecture you attend whose topic is salient to the course material and either designated by the instructor as eligible for extra credit or approved by the instructor upon your request. One point will be rewarded for each report up to a total of just two points; (2) by participating as subjects in surveys or behavioral experiments conducted by Government faculty or graduate students. Students may do this once for two points. If you choose to do both 1 and 2, you may earn up to a maximum of 4 points on your final course grade.

Grades will be computed in the following manner:

| | |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>

Letter grades and plus and minuses will be determined by the following scale:

- 93-100 = A
- 90-92 = A-
- 87-89 = B+
- 83-86 = B
- 80-82 = B-
- 77-79 = C+
- 73-76 = C
- 70-72 = C-
- 60-69 = D
- Below 60 = F
