COURSE DESCRIPTION:
In this course students will gain an understanding of European history over the last five centuries. We will investigate a range of significant developments in the social, cultural, and economic history of the European continent and beyond. Lectures and readings will proceed chronologically from the fifteenth century to the late twentieth century. This time frame is marked by Europe’s growing global hegemony, manifest in forces such as colonialism and capitalism, making its history of world historical importance. The institutions of the modern state appeared at the beginning of our period, and they were accompanied by an uneven process of social and political transformation that yielded the “dual revolutions,” the French and Industrial Revolutions at the end of the eighteenth century. The course will look at these processes along with the emergence of a class-based society in the nineteenth century. We will also investigate intellectual and cultural forces such as modern ideologies of rupture and the trend toward secular thought. We conclude with the contemporary period, an age marked in Europe by material abundance but plagued by unequal social relations and enduring social discontent.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:
This course carries the Global Cultures flag. Accordingly, the course material and our assignments will cover the history of societies outside the United States. Students will learn the skills of historical analysis and interpretation, along with the historical material itself. This will include the ability to grasp the complexity of historical debates and rethink received knowledge in light of new research, as well as mastering a sizable range of historical events, individuals, and key concepts. The overarching goal is to inspire students to engage their world critically and give them the intellectual tools and diversity of perspective to do. Coursework and evaluations will focus on students’ ability to articulate coherent and sustained arguments in writing and verbally. There are no pre-requisites.

REQUIRED TEXTS:
You will need to purchase the following book or use reserve copies in library. Additional required readings noted in schedule of class meetings will be distributed electronically or placed on library reserve.

- Judith Coffin et al., Western Civilizations: Their History & Their Culture, 17th ed. (ISBN: 978-0-393-93483-0 pbk) Note: You may use the 16th edition of the this textbook for considerable savings. However, page numbers in the syllabus refer to the 17th edition; page numbers in earlier editions will vary. Those who chose previous editions are responsible for negotiating the differences. )

Other: Blackboard will have copies of the other selected readings required for the course discussions.
COURSE RULES:
• Laptops are to be used only for taking notes. Thus there will be no use of email, web browsers, or other software that accesses the Internet during our meetings. (Infractions of this rule will result in a substantial loss to the participation component of the violator’s grade, up to 15% of the total grade.)
• Cell phone use of any sort, including text messages, will not be tolerated.
• If you would like the record the lectures, please see me first.

ASSIGNMENTS:
• Exams: There will be one midterm and a comprehensive final exam. These exams will consist of analytical ID’s and essays. A review list of potential questions will be distributed in advance so that students can prepare for the exams. SEE BELOW FOR DATES.
• Critical Essay on Emile Zola’s L’Assommoir. This essay will address how a literary text relates to its historical context. L’Assommoir is a powerful novel with a complex message of social critique. You will be asked to examine its ideological and critical tendencies. Length: 5 pp., double-spaced. SEE BELOW FOR DUE DATE.
• Discussions: Periodically our course work will center on readings and discussions (SEE BELOW FOR SCHEDULE). You are required to prepare these readings in advance and come to class with a question for discussion.
