COURSE DESCRIPTION:
This course takes as its purview novels published by US writers in the 1920s and 1930s. The vexed and vibrant interwar period includes the Jazz Age and the Great Depression as well as the publication of major works by Nobel Prize-winning authors Pearl Buck, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway, Eugene O'Neill, Sinclair Lewis, and John Steinbeck. This period was also the golden age of detective fiction. The required readings offer a geographically diverse range of works: Faulkner's Mississippi; Hemingway's France and Spain; Hurston's Florida; Larsen's Chicago, New York, and Denmark; Downing's Mexico; McNickle's Montana; Niggli's Mexico; West's Los Angeles; and Wright's Chicago. We will place these works in their regional, national, and historical contexts, consider their stylistic innovations, and attend particularly to questions of class and race. Visits to the Harry Ransom Center, which has substantial collections from this period, will also be a part of the course.

TEXTS:
Hemingway, Ernest. The Sun Also Rises (1926)
Larsen, Nella. Quicksand (1928) and Passing (1929)
Faulkner, William. As I Lay Dying (1930)
McNickle, D'Arcy. The Surrounded (1936)
Hurston, Zora Neale. Their Eyes Were Watching God (1937)
West, Nathanael. The Day of the Locust (1939)
Wright, Richard. Native Son (1940)
Niggli, Josefina. Mexican Village (1945)

CLASS REQUIREMENTS:
ATTENDANCE: You should plan to attend every class. Excessive absences (more than 5) will lower your final grade one full letter. Please do not be late to class, as being late is disruptive and disrespectful to your classmates, and please do not bring laptop computers to class.

PRESENTATION: I will ask each one of you to facilitate class discussion one day during the semester. For this assignment, please plan to speak for 5-10 minutes solely about the reading assignment for that day. There are several possible formats for your presentation, but your main goal should be to share your thoughts and questions about the reading.
TWO-PAGE ESSAYS: Four (4) two-page, double-spaced analyses of four (4) different reading assignments of your choice. The short essays should be explorations of very specific questions, concerns, insights, observations, etc., that you have about the readings. Your discussion might focus on aesthetic (formal), historical, and/or cultural (gender, religious, political) concerns, for example. You are welcome to ask me for suggestions about what ideas to explore in these essays, though I strongly encourage you to make these decisions on your own. These short essays can be developed into one of the longer essays. PLEASE SEE SHORT ESSAY DUE DATES IN THE DAILY CLASS SCHEDULE BELOW.

FOUR-PAGE ESSAYS: Two (2) four-page, double-spaced analyses of a specific issue (literary, cultural, historical, political, etc.) or problem in one of the works we are reading. These papers should include an introduction with a clear, specific thesis and a general outline of your argument and its main points. In addition, the writing should be clearly focused, well-organized, well-polished, and demonstrate careful reading of the text/s that you discuss. Please use one-inch margins and twelve-point type, preferably Times New Roman, and correct MLA format. PLEASE SEE THE LONGER ESSAY DUE DATES IN THE DAILY CLASS SCHEDULE BELOW.

EIGHT-PAGE ESSAY OPTION: You have the option of writing one eight-page essay rather than two four-page essays. The requirements other than the page length are the same. If you choose this option, your essay is due on either one of the four-page essay due dates.

For those of you who are concerned about your writing, determined to earn a high grade in the class, and/or interested in working on your writing skills, I will read rough drafts of your papers. In addition, I have graded papers in my office from other classes that you can read in order to get some sense of how I grade.

*GRADES: Your overall grade will be calculated in the following way:
Four 2-page essays – 40% total
Two 4-page essays OR one 8-page essay – 40% total
Attendance, class participation (quality and quantity), presentation – 20% total

*Plus/minus grades will not be assigned.
