Office Hours: M and W, 3:00-4:30pm, and by appointment

Description
The story of novels written in the United States to 1920, told in relation to major political and aesthetic movements in the Anglophone world. Fundamental questions about the genre and its contentious development will be raised as we explore the relationship of US-based long fiction to movements such as the Gothic, Realism, Utopianism, and Naturalism, and to modes such as the picturesque, the sublime, and the sentimental. We will ask, among other things, how the novel changed peoples’ ideas about themselves, sent people to war, and built or broke down ideas about “America,” race, gender, and religion.

Objectives
The course will:
• survey the American novel between the late eighteenth- and early twentieth-centuries
• model methods of literary and cultural interpretation
• help students improve critical thinking, writing, and reading skills

Requirements and Evaluation
Participation (25%)
Students are expected to be active participants in the classroom and active readers outside of it. Reading quizzes and occasional short assigned presentations (individual and group) will be required. Each week you will be asked to write something in response to that week’s reading, which you will email to me before Monday’s class meeting. Bring a copy of it to class, because sometimes I will ask you to read (or demonstrate) it to the class. Attendance is mandatory; repeated unexcused absences will affect your grade negatively.

Examinations (50%)
You’ll take two examinations during the term. The midterm exam will be worth 20% of the final grade; the final exam will be 30% of the final grade. Both exams will include identifications, short answer and essay questions.

Essay (25% of final grade)
Students will produce two 5-page essays during the course of the term; more specific instructions about these papers will be handed out in advance of the due dates, which are indicated on the schedule below.
NB: Plus/minus grades will be assigned for the final grade of the course. Grades will be determined on the following basis:

The University does not recognize the grade of A+.

Academic Integrity
Each student is expected to abide by the University Code of Academic Integrity:
“The core values of The University of Texas at Austin are learning, discovery, freedom, leadership, individual opportunity, and responsibility. Each member of the University is expected to uphold these values through integrity, honesty, trust, fairness, and respect toward peers and community.” Any work submitted for academic credit must be your own.

Accommodations for students with disabilities
The University of Texas at Austin provides, upon request, appropriate academic accommodations for qualified students with disabilities. For more information, contact the Division of Diversity and Community Engagement, Services for Students with Disabilities at 471-6259 (471-4641 TTY).

Email Protocol
Email will be used as a primary means of communication in this course. You will be responsible for checking your email regularly. I will, in turn, do my best to respond to emails in a timely fashion. While I am more than happy to answer brief queries over email, Office Hours are the place for substantial discussions about course materials and assignments. Please do come by.

Common courtesy
Please silence your cell phones, refrain from texting, and limit your use of laptop computers during class.

Course Texts
All texts available at the Co-Op, 2246 Guadalupe; additional readings listed on the schedule will be available via Blackboard.
