Doctoral Portfolio Program in Romance Linguistics

The Fall 2011 term marked the inception of the Doctoral Portfolio Program in Romance Linguistics in the Department of French and Italian at the University of Texas at Austin. The program offers graduate students who combine an interest in linguistics and Romance languages the opportunity to develop the analytical skills necessary to conduct research of comparative and typological nature.

Students will additionally develop a specialization unique to their own program of work through Romance Linguistics courses and a capstone research project. While it is restricted to doctoral students, we particularly encourage those who are interested in the science of language and in Romance languages to join this novel, cross-disciplinary academic study.
