Course Description

This course is a study of one of the most traumatic periods in South African history. It is also a study of a people’s agency and resilience in the face of state-sanctioned terror. With a brief detour into the deeper past of South Africa to contextualize the rise of apartheid, the course will predominantly focus on the period since 1948. We will study the social, political, economic, and cultural history of a nation in the grip of legalized oppression from the perspectives of women, children, and men - of all "racial" backgrounds - who lived through that particular period. While the course will focus on both oppression and agency, and the in-between-spaces, students are advised that some of the course content (books, audio, and video material) will include violent scenes. Such was the history of apartheid in South Africa, but overall, students will come away with a greater appreciation not only of the history of that country, but of Southern Africa, and the United States’ role in supporting the apartheid regime as well as the anti-apartheid movement in South African and abroad. The course will NOT cover everything, but aim for a deeper understanding of some of the key moments that illuminate apartheid in the history of South Africa. This is a critical reading and writing intensive course. Those students interested in improving their writing skills will find this a rewarding course. Samukele, Kamohelo, Welcome!

The History Department and The University of Texas at Austin take Academic integrity, also known as Plagiarism, very seriously. Students who violate University rules on scholastic dishonesty are subject to disciplinary penalties, including the possibility of failure in the course and/or dismissal from the University. For an overview of the University and Department's policy regarding scholastic dishonesty, see these websites: http://www.utexas.edu/cola/depts/history/about/academic-integrity.php http://deanofstudents.utexas.edu/sjs/acint_student.php

Religious Holy Day Policy: In this course, we follow the UT Policy for observance of any religious holiday. The Student should inform the Professor as far in advance as possible to make arrangements.

Course Grading Policy: The grades come in the +/- and straight range, as in: A+, A, A-, and so on. An A range grade signifies "exceptionally high achievement". The B range denotes "superior achievement". Students who receive a C range grade achieved a "satisfactory" mark. Then there are the lower marks- the D range calls attention to the students who achieved a "passing but unsatisfactory" mark. Likewise, an F range means "failure", and an “I” is an "incomplete" for the course.

Class Attendance and Participation: This is not a course by correspondence. To that end, your physical, intellectual, and whole self is expected in class each day. Missing more than two classes – for whatever reason – means you will automatically lose 50% of your attendance and participation grade. Plan accordingly.

Disability Statement: Any student who feels he or she may need an accommodation based on the impact of a disability should contact me privately as soon as possible to discuss his or her specific needs. I rely on the College of Liberal Arts for the need for reasonable accommodation based on documentation on file in their offices. Please act early as retroactive accommodation is not an option.

Classroom Etiquette: Respect is important both in and outside the classroom. In the classroom it means raising your hand, waiting your turn, and being respectful of different points of view on different issues. Also, in the 21st century, everyone has a laptop, smart phone, or whatever; so except on designated days please turn off/silence and store away your gizmos during class.

Communication: Updates about the class will be mainly through Blackboard and email. Please make sure you have an active UT email, and/or make sure your preferred email address is set up to receive class emails. Ignorance of important class information is inadmissible as an excuse.
In response to unforeseen events, this syllabus may be Subject to Revision.
