

The Materiality of the Commons

April 17-18, 2020

Glickman Conference Center, RLP 1.302B, and Blanton Museum of Art
University of Texas at Austin

“The Materiality of the Commons” conference brings together scholars and activists interested in exploring the history of the commons for contemporary political thought and activism. Presenters working in political, legal, labor, post-colonial, queer, and environmental humanities, as well as practitioners in the arts, are invited to share their ideas on collectives and commons.

Hosted by the Institute for Historical Studies, with the generous co-sponsorship of the Department of History, Department of English, Center for European Studies, Department of Asian Studies, Department of African and African Diaspora Studies, John L. Warfield Center for African and African American Studies, Latino Studies, Center for Russian, East European and Eurasian Studies, and more to be announced. Free and open to the public.
