Tweeting for Proficiency:

How Using Social Media Can Benefit Language Learning

Prof. Thomas J. Garza
Slavic and Eurasian Studies
Texas Language Center
University of Texas at Austin
Online Social Networking on Campus
Understanding What Matters in Student Culture

Ana M. Martínez Alemán
Katherine Lynk Wartman
Why Tweet?

• Concision: 140 character limit
• Real time communication
• Multiple-user interface
• Simultaneous “turn taking”
• Anonymity, if desired
- News: 3.60%
- Spam: 3.75%
- Self-promotion: 5.86%
- Pointless babble: 40.54%
- Conversational: 37.55%
- Retweets: 8.70%
First Attempts: Non-FL Classes

- @teeneyteeney fascinating music choice. It makes the fight seem religious.
- @heyfoxyrox forever the battle of big pointy sticks.
- @cagerton sunglasses? Brightness? Loud noises. Seems like a hangover to me
- @crlshtcr i'm glad daywatch opens with multiple decapitations then promptly moves to a forced abortion.
- @cagerton this guy uses tonnes of flies... Makes me like the little spider scene
- @RedRaspberry6 So they didn't have any reason to fight except that neither one wanted to move?
- @randomlove36 interesting how the dark side is shown as so animalistic with their animal skins compared to the sleek mechanical light side
- @teeneyteeney Spiders seem to appear often in this type of story.
- @heyfoxyrox without identifying as us or them, who are we?
First Attempts: Non-FL Classes